

Strict-cold predictive performance and molecular-feature availability

Molecular fingerprints did not uniformly improve whole-test-set performance. Within molecular runs, the subset of drugs with usable SMILES showed higher ranking performance than the subset without molecular features.